CONANT'S PATENT YEAST.

A CCORDING to an old maxim, "Bread is the Staff of Life," but it is certain that good, healthful bread—sweet, light and digestible—is by no means easily obtained, and myrinds of persons are obliged to wander along without that essential staff. Chemical science and research were never expended for a more necessary and metal purpose than in the discovery of the material which should promptly and certainly produce good bread. That great desideration has been obtained by the skill and patience of Mr. Conxart, of Lowell, who has succreased the ingredient respirate for the procuring of super excellent bread as quickly as the floor can be kneaded and laked.

It is demonstrable that, by the old slow process of vinous fermentation, much of the nutritious portion of the flour is extracted; but by the application of CONANT'S PATENT.

and laked. It is demonstrable that, by the old slow process of vinous fermentation, much of the nutritious portion of the flour is extracted; but by the application of C ONANTS PATENT YEAST, instantaneous efferreaceure directly follows, and all the saccharine properties of the meal are retained, thus curing the entire nourishment which the flour naturally in-
